LONDON, November 17.

W hear, that it has been resolved in a certain place, that a work which was complained of, and several passages of which were read, was a most scandalous, obscene and impious libel a gross profanation of the holy Scripture, and a most wicked and blasphemous attempt to ridicule and vilify the person of our blessed Saviour. Evidence was offered to prove the work was written by a gentleman who has been lately the subject of much political dispute, but the further consideration of it is deferred.

The house of commons, which met on tuesday, continued sitting 'till two o'clock on wednesday morning.

Yesterday about twelve o'clock, a duel was fought in Hyde-Park, between John Wilkes, Esq; member for Aylesbury, and Samuel Martin, Esq; member for Camelford, and late secretary of the treasury. At first, both their pistols missed fire; at the second attempt to fire, Mr. Martin's did the same again; upon which Mr. Wilkes declared discharging his, and offered Mr. Martin the choice of either of his pistols, which Mr. Martin refused. They then turned back to back; and upon turning about again; Mr. Martin discharged his pistol, and the ball went into Mr. Wilkes's belly about half an inch below the navel, and sunk obliquely in the right side of the belly down towards the groin. Upon which Mr. Wilkes said, Mr. Martin, take care of yourself, for you have done for me. Mr. Martin replied, he would get him what assistance he could; and perceiving a chariot at a distance coming up to it, and with the person in it that a gentleman lay wounded on the ground, and begged he would immediately drive out of the park, and get a chair, which was done, and Mr. Wilkes was brought to his own house. A surgeon being immediately sent for, the ball was extracted, and the surgeon was of opinion, that as it had not penetrated the abdomen, it would be attended with no bad consequences. The occasion of the above quarrel is said to be Mr. M.'s declaring in a great assembly, that the author of the North-Briton, was a base, infamous, coward and scoundrel, &c. — The passages in that paper, which are supposed to have given offence to Mr. M. in particular, are to be found in No. 17, and 40.

November 19.

Yesterday Fletcher Norton, Esq; solicitor-general, kissed his majesty's hand, on being promoted to be attorney-general.

November 22.

Mr. Wilkes continues in a fair way of recovery; but was not well enough to attend the house of peers this day to be examined concerning a most obscene and highly blasphemous treatise, which he is said to have written some years ago; and of which he is charged with employing the press he set up last summer at his house in Great George-street, to cast off another twelve dozen copies. To add, if possible, to the indecency of this piece, the Great George-street edition of it is made to bear, it is said, in the title-page, the name of one Prelate as the author, and the name of another as the annotator; both of whom are not more distinguished by their great learning, which is universally acknowledged, than by their unblemished morals, and their masterly defences of the principal points of the christian religion.

November 23.

The court of common pleas was moved for an attachment against the publisher of a new paper called The Moderator, in which the justice and dignity of that court was attacked. In respect to the enlargement of Mr. Wilkes, as his place of privilege, and the defendant was ordered to shew cause why the attachment should not be granted.

November 24.

The right hon. William Pitt attended yesterday the service of the house, tho' he was so infirm with the gout, that he was obliged to be carried into the house by two of his servants.

We hear that 4,000 recruits, extraordinary supplies, will be required to make good deficiencies that have occurred during the course of the late war.

Tuesday the house of lords deferred the further consideration of Mr. Wilkes's affair till that day fortnight, on account of his incapacity to attend that house. We find that there is only one prelate mentioned in the blasphemous poem which Mr. Wilkes is charged with being the author of; the notes upon it being put in his lordship's name! Which it is imagined he was led to make use of from his being so well known in the literary world, and particularly for his writings in defence of christianity.

November 26.

The house of commons sat till two o'clock yesterday morning.

A motion having been made in the court of common pleas, in behalf of the king's messengers, that the records against them might be set aside, on account of excesses in the court granted rules for the plaintiff to shew cause why new trials should not be ordered, and this day the matter was argued, when the motion was set aside, and the former verdict confirmed.

November 29.

On saturday his excellency the Spanish ambassador arrived at Powis-house, in Great Ormond-street, from Dover, where he landed last thursday night.

Lord Stormont arrived at Vienna the 7th instant, to reside there as ambassador from his Britannic majesty.

Letters from Lisbon, dated the 10th inst. advise, that on the 28th ult. the Centurion man of war (on board of which was his royal highness the duke of York) together with the Thames, Capt. Elliott, sailed for Gibraltar.

Yesterday Admiral Sir George Pococke, knight of the bath, was married to the widow of Commodore Dent.

The French king has given the government of St. Domingo, vacant by the death of M. de Belfounce, to the famous Count d'Estain, who served in the East-Indies.

December 1.

Yesterday his royal highness the duke of Cumberland attended in the house of lords. Their lordships sat late on matters of great importance.

Mr. Wilkes's wound was opened last thursday, a gathering having been discovered, the certain consequence of which it was found necessary to prevent as soon as possible, otherwise his life would have been in imminent danger; but since that time he has been much better, can now walk about in his room, and will in a few days attend his service in parliament.

It is reported that a great personage's fortune, at her marriage, will be eighty thousand pounds in money.

His royal highness the duke of Cumberland is going to have the Great Park, near Windsor, enclosed with a handsome brick wall, the circumference of which will be near forty miles. It is said the agreement is a thousand pounds for every mile; that a great number of workmen are to be employed thereon; and that the wall will be begun early next spring.

December 3.

Yesterday the hon. house of commons, preceded by Sir John Cust, bart. their speaker, waited on the king at St. James's, with their address of thanks, on his majesty's communicating to them the intended marriage of his sister the princess Augusta, with the hereditary prince of Brunswick, which was most graciously received.

We hear that there are now upwards of 40 sail of ships sitting out in the rivers of the African trade.

December 6.

On saturday last there was the greatest mob assembled at the Royal Exchange that has been seen there for a long while, to see the North-Briton burnt. About half after twelve a man appeared with a large bundle of billet faggots, followed by Jack Ketch with a lighted link; on which the mob immediately began hissing, hooting, &c. After the faggots were put on the ground, it was with great difficulty the mob was kept from seizing them from the constables, of whom there were a great number, who owed their preservation to their resolution, which was never so much exerted by any constables as on this occasion, as the heads of many of the mob can testify. From this time, to the coming up of the Sheriffs, there was one continued hustling of the Constables, accompanied with shoutings, hissings, and pelting them with dirt. When Mr Alderman Harley's chariot which came first, approached the place the horses were so frightened at the noise and the lighted link, that they could not be got to it; on which, Mr. Harley kept out of his chariot, and attended by the city-marshal, constables, &c. came and read the order for burning the North-Briton. All which time the noises continued, and some dirt fell on his head. When he had done reading, the North-Briton was put on the link and just as it began to blaze, great part of it was knocked off by the mob and fell on the ground. The Sheriff then retired to his chariot, and the mob breaking in upon the constables, who surrounded Jack Ketch, seized the short billets, and began to fall foul of the constables, who were glad to retreat. Many people were much hurt, and Mr. Sheriff Harley's front glass of his chariot was broke by a billet thrown at it, and himself slightly scratched on the head, on which he jumped out, and went to the Mansion-house, where soon after a young fellow was brought for being active in the riot, and after being examined, was committed to Newgate (on the oath of one of the Constables) by the name of John Franklin; another was sent to the Compter.

On saturday night a large bonfire was made just without Temple-bar, on account of the North-Briton not having as yet received its intended destination; when a large Jack-boot stuffed with straw was burnt in effigy amidst the acclamations of a large body of spectators.

Yesterday the right hon. the House of Peers, preceded by the lord chancellor, waited on his majesty with their congratulatory address, on the approaching marriage of her Royal Highness the Princess Augusta with the Hereditary Prince of Brunswick, which was most graciously received.

We hear that the Hereditary Prince of Brunswick, on his marriage to the Princess Augusta, will have an annuity of 50001. per annum on the Irish establishment, and 30001. on the revenues of Hanover.

It is said that the mob were not a little encouraged and worked up to oppose the hangman on saturday in burning the North-Briton, pursuant to the order of parliament, by the well-dressed people who filled all the windows within sight of the place, and the balcony of the Royal-Exchange, who made the air resound with their clapping at every effort made by the mob, in spite of the sheriff, his officers, and the constables, to extinguish the fire and the link.

December 8.

The following is his majesty's answer to the address of the right hon. the House of Peers and the hon. House of Commons, presented to his majesty on monday last,

My Lords and Gentlemen,

'This very affectionate zeal which you express for the vindication 'of my honour, and your declared resolution to support the authority 'of parliament, cannot fail of being extremely grateful to me. It has 'been hitherto, and it always shall be, my care to regulate my conduct 'according to the principles of the constitution. I will not therefore 'be wanting in carrying the laws into execution against all who shall 'presume to violate any of those principles. And in this resolution I 'doubt not of receiving the hearty concurrence and support both of 'my parliament and my people.'

Tuesday one of the most interesting points of civil liberty was determined in a cause in Westminster-hall, before the truly patriotic and right hon. lord chief justice Pratt, and a special jury of gentlemen of the county of Middlesex, wherein John Wilkes, Esq; was plaintiff, and Robert Wood, Esq; member of parliament for Brackley, and late under secretary of state, was defendant, (for seizing Mr Wilkes's papers as the supposed author of the North-Briton No. 45.) when, after a hearing of near fifteen hours, and many learned arguments on both sides, and a most masterly, pathetic, and eloquent charge, given by his lordship, and the jury withdrawing for half an hour, a verdict was given for the plaintiff, with one thousand pounds damages with full costs of suit.

It was thought there was the greatest concourse of people in Westminster-hall ever known, who shewed the profoundest attention to the discussion of a cause, that, in the highest degree, affected the most sacred and inviolable rights and liberties of Englishmen; and, immediately after the verdict was pronounced, they were the loudest acclamations that can possibly be imagined. A large body of the people went to Mr. Wilkes's house in Great George-street, with French horns, crying out, "PRATT, WILKES, and LIBERTY FOR EVER." And they afterwards proceeded to lord Halifax's.

By this important decision, every Englishman has the satisfaction of seeing, that his house is his castle, and is not liable to be searched, nor his papers pried into, by the malignant curiosity of king's messengers, and an utter end is put to this unconstitutional practice; and it may be truly said, that no question was ever agitated in a court of judicature of more interesting consequences to society.

The cause against Philip Carteret Webb, Esq; was put off, at the request of his council, till the first sitting after next term.

There are nine more causes depending, which have been brought against the secretaries of state, and the messengers, &c. who were concerned in arresting Mr. Wilkes's person, taking possession of his house, and seizing his papers.

Six more causes will be tried at these sittings in Guildhall, brought by Mr. Dryden Leach, and several of his men, against the king's messengers, for false imprisonment, on account of the North-Briton, No. 45.

Mr. Wilkes's physician and surgeon were yesterday examined before a certain great assembly, and declared, that his health would not yet permit him to attend. Upon which the business relating to him was put off to a further day.

On tuesday last Mr. Charles Churchill set out for Paris.

The trial on tuesday did not end till twenty minutes past eleven at night. The defendant pleaded a special plea, in which he averred, that Mr. Wilkes was the publisher of No. 45, of the North-Briton. It is said, that the lord chief-justice was two hours in summoning up the evidence.

December 10.

On monday next, his majesty's yachts will fall down the river, in order to sail immediately to bring over the duke of Brunswick, who, it is said, will be here against the 21st inst.

December 13.

On saturday came on at Guildhall, before the right hon. lord chief justice Pratt, and a special jury of eminent merchants, the important cause, wherein Mr. Dryden Leach, (the master printer, who was arrested as the supposed printer of the celebrated North-Briton, No. 45.) was plaintiff, and three of the king's messengers defendants; when, after a hearing of seven hours, a verdict was given for the plaintiff, in four hundred pounds damages with full costs of suit.

Immediately after the verdict was pronounced, the gentlemen concerned for the plaintiffs declared, 'That as they had the 'happiness of seeing vindicated, asserted and maintained, all 'the great and constitutional points of liberty, which had been 'so solemnly debated and determined, they were willing to ac-'cept nominal damages, (which carry costs of suit) in the next 'five causes.' A proposition so generous, and highly meritorious from conquerors was readily acquiesced in by the council for the crown, commended by the court, and applauded by the whole audience.

Bills of exceptions are brought in the twenty causes, which have been determined in favour of the printers, as also in Mr. Wilkes's.

Part of the conclusion of the speech of ———

'This warrant is unconstitutional, illegal, and absolutely 'void. It is a general warrant, directed to four messengers, 'to take up any persons, without naming or describing them 'with any certainty, and to bring them together with their 'papers. If it be good, a secretary of state can delegate and 'depute any one of the messengers, or any even from the low-'est of the people, to take examinations, to commit or release, 'and in fine to do every act which the highest judicial officers 'the law knows can do or order. There is no authority in our 'law books that mention these kinds of warrants, but in ex-'press terms condemn them.'

'I do venture to pronounce this warrant illegal. However, 'I am well pleased that this matter is finally to be decided up-'on in the highest court of judicature in this kingdom, where able 'and most learned judges will argue and determine the point; 'and if I am there found to have given a wrong opinion, I shall 'kiss the rod; but I shall always say, it is a rod of iron upon 'the people of this kingdom.'

We are credibly informed, that the earl of Shelburne and Col. Barré, who were said to have resigned their several employments of aid-de-camp to his majesty, deputy adjutent-general and lieutenant-governor of Stirling-Castle, were actually dismissed from their said respective employments.

A German gentleman is going to establish a manufactory for making marble slabs, chimney-pieces, &c. The marble will be ground to powder, and mixed with other ingredients, and be then cast in the most beautiful bass-relievos, with the highest polish, and several hundred will be executed before a statuary can carve a single one.

A diet of the Empire is to be held at Francfort (not at Augsburgh) on the 7th of next month, for the election of a king of the Romans, when the Archduke Joseph will be unanimously chosen by all the nine electors.
